

The University of South Carolina is facing issues with overcrowding in its resource centers and physical fitness facilities, limiting student access and reducing the overall quality of support and wellness services.